An Exceptional Award to Honor an Exceptional Researcher

The SHRM Foundation honors exceptional researchers for their achievements in human-resource research. The fund was established to honor Michael R. Losey for his contributions to the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) and the HR field. Since the award's inception, it has been presented to icons in the HR research field, many of whom continue to serve the profession through ongoing research efforts. Winners are presented with a check for $50,000 at an annual SHRM Foundation event. To learn more about the award and its honorees, visit shrmfoundation.org/awards

How much is the award?

The annual award is $50,000 to the researcher.

What is the deadline to submit a nomination?

Submissions must be received no later than July 15, 2019. Please send nominations by e-mail (lal.benitah@shrm.org) or via US mail to arrive by that date.

Who is eligible?

The award recognizes significant contributions to the HR field through empirical research and its application. To be eligible, the nominee must demonstrate:

- o a track record of extensive contributions to research in the HR field;
- o evidence of the development of research appropriate to the focus of the research; and
- o a depth of scholarship, criticality and originality.

Additionally, the nominee must engage with the practitioner community, and provide a portfolio of work that reflects a variety of research outputs, including substantial or sole contributions to books, chapters in books and articles in refereed journals. The award website (shrmfoundation.org/awards) includes information about scholarly journals known for rigorous standards to help assess the breadth, depth and reach of the nominee's research efforts.

Where can I read about previous recipients of the award?

Profiles of the previous recipients are featured at shrmfoundation.org/awards. Each profile includes information on the accomplishments of the recipient and will provide a benchmark of achievement that the selection committee considers during its deliberations.

Can I nominate more than one individual?

Yes. An individual may submit or co-sign the nomination of more than one candidate.

Are there any limitations on whom I can nominate?

This award is open to those who meet the eligibility requirements, with the exception of current SHRM and SHRM Foundation members, and members of SHRM volunteer panels. Self-nominations will not be accepted. Although an individual cannot nominate him/herself or submit his/her own nomination package, any other individual may nominate someone who meets the eligibility criteria.

Our SHRM chapter would like to nominate someone. Is that possible?

Only an individual or a small group of individuals from the chapter—but not the entire chapter—may nominate any person who meets the eligibility requirements.

What should the nomination package include?

A complete nomination package must include a current detailed CV or resumé and a letter of no more than two pages that includes:

- o a summary of the nominee's significant past and continuing contributions related to the HR field, including the focal point of the nominee's research
- o a description detailing why the individual is being nominated
- o a complete list of all publications and significant speaking engagements
- o A statement that highlights the nominee's work with HR practitioners.

Where should I send my nomination?

Electronic submissions are strongly encouraged. Please email nominations to loseyaward@shrm.org. or mail a hard-copy nomination to:
