

SHRM Research Spotlight: Employee Job Satisfaction and Engagement

Shedding Light on the Business of HR | shrm.org/research | Twitter @SHRM_Research

Key Findings

- Employees are satisfied with their jobs. Eighty-six percent of employees reported overall satisfaction with their current job.
- Employees are engaged at work. Ninety-two percent of employees indicated feeling confident they could meet their work goals, and 88% reported feeling determined to accomplish these goals.
- There are several conditions under which engagement at work is more likely to occur. Over three-fourths (79%) of employees were satisfied with their relationships with co-workers. Employees also reported being satisfied with the contribution of their work to the organization's business goals (76%) and the meaningfulness of the job (75%).
- Respectful treatment of all employees at all levels demonstrated the largest gap between importance and satisfaction among employees. While 72% of employees reported respectful treatment as a very important job satisfaction contributor, only 33% were very satisfied with it. Compensation/pay had the second largest gap, at 37 percentage points.
